

Bogotá, Colombia, February 21th, 2017.

The Investment Manager Training that took place in Mexico City last month was a meaningful experience, and I would like to thank the Ricardo Salinas Foundation for its generosity. I greatly appreciate your support to be one of the professionals selected to receive the scholarship. The scholarship was the deciding factor that helped me attend the program.

The training was a great opportunity to share experiences with colleagues with diverse focuses in the impact investment environment. Both senior and junior participants added a lot of value to class exercises and discussions, and because of that, I have expanded my vision and my network of contacts.

The contents were very relevant and practical, and I already started applying my new knowledge to the due diligence process that I run. I also have lots of new resources to start a research project on Colombian Small and Medium Enterprises and their connection to the Sustainable Development Goals, a topic that I find very interesting.

I would especially like to thank John Kohler, an amazing trainer and strong communicator that guided me through the course contents in a professional and interactive way. Finally, I'm very grateful with the ANDE team, Katia, and Rosario, who were always attentive to any questions and requests and made our stay in Mexico City a very enjoyable one.

Alejandra Torres
Yunus Social Business